

LOVE IN THE TIME OF ISOLATION

Today is #GivingTuesdayNow, a new global day of giving and unity created in response to the unprecedented need caused by COVID-19.

Our teams in India and the U.S. are hard at work assisting people who have been affected by this pandemic. In under three months we've provided hundreds of thousands of Gratitude Grocery Kits for struggling people in India, thousands of N95 masks and ready-to-eat meals for local healthcare heroes in the U.S., thousands of handmade Mindfulness Masks for rural villagers, funding for two COVID-19 treatment facilities in Gujarat, and much more. Visit our blog to see a detailed list of disaster relief projects, updates, and photos.

These efforts have been made possible through our disaster relief committee, which acted quickly in March to allocate an initial $100,000 in funds — eventually doubling that amount for a total of $200,000 in aid for this ongoing crisis.

Thousands of Mindfulness Masks, handmade by artisan women, have been distributed to families in rural Indian villages.

Meals are delivered to healthcare workers at JFK Medical Center in Edison, NJ.

It is because of your continued generosity, even during challenging times, that we are able to carry out these urgent and life-saving initiatives. We — along with our on-the-ground partners in India — are truly appreciative of your support.

“We are grateful to Share & Care for sending funds amid such an unfortunate crisis. On behalf of our Ashram family, we take this moment to bow before you for showing us how crisis gives us a chance to find our best selves again and to renew our connection to one another beyond all boundaries.”

—Sabarmati Ashram

“The coronavirus crisis has brought such testing times, and we are grateful to this team of [volunteers], who are doing wonders. We feel gratitude for the whole Share & Care family for supporting such interventions.”

—ESI, a Gujarat NGO Partner

Together, we have already helped thousands of people affected by this pandemic. However, our work to assist struggling families, healthcare heroes, and frontline workers continues. If you would like to contribute to this important cause, we humbly invite you to honor #GivingTuesdayNow with a donation for those in need.
