

Jyoti's Story: HOW SHARE & CARE IS EMPOWERING WOMEN IN RURAL INDIA

Join Us in Honoring the International Day of Rural Women

Jyoti is a resident of Matihi, a rural village located in Ambedkar Nagar, Uttar Pradesh, where she lives with her parents and her five siblings. Her father, a daily wage worker, is the sole earner in her family. When the COVID-19 pandemic struck, Jyoti's father struggled to find enough work to continue supporting his family, and Jyoti, along with her mother and siblings, felt this financial strain.

Upon seeing this hardship, the Mijwan Welfare Society, supported by Share & Care, stepped in.

Through the Samridhhi Saksham Program for Dress Stitching, Jyoti received a sewing machine kit and training at no cost. This sewing machine has allowed her to begin stitching clothes for her entire community, and she now earns around Rs. 4,000-5,000 monthly.

With this consistent source of income, Jyoti is able to support her family financially, and she is even able to finance her sisters' education. This program empowered her to learn a new skill, earn her own income, take on a leadership role in her household, and provide her sisters with an education, creating a ripple effect that extends far beyond Jyoti.

“I am also now like a son for my dad, now that I am able to help him out with daily household expenses. I can also make sure that my sisters' education isn't halted."
